THE HARVESTER

1949

Dear Spoonemore
101

This 1949 annual depicts a school day in Pampa High School, from early dawn to nightfall, in which the individual student plays the main part. This yearbook shows the school with its students at work and play: the rhythm of a single day, from dawn to the rush and bustle of noon with its lunch intervals, to the end of the day, and beginning of the evening with its recreation hours.

This panorama of Pampa High can be epitomized in the first picture of the series, with the school at dawn as the sun rises in the east. The town is still asleep. Here the school stands at its quietest moment of the day, waiting for the arrival of the janitors, students, and faculty.

The Harvester

1949

The town is beginning to wake up. The buses are getting ready to leave the barns before it is completely light to pick up rural students and bring them to school.

DEDICATION

The 1949 HARVESTER is dedicated to Claris Glick, the head of the Journalism Department of Pampa High School. Her guidance and supervision make possible the HARVESTER and the LITTLE HARVESTER, the two publications of school life which mean so much to every student.

FACULTY

Coach Aubra Nooncaster, Mrs. Mable Torvie, and Miss Virginia Vaughan are representative of the faculty as they read the bulletin for the day, while other teachers are opening their rooms and students are preparing for their first period classes.

8. Always busy is neat Johnye Sue Hart.

9. Caught off guard are Don Byars and Dan Stallings.

10. The very talented Lowell Stark!

Harmony is obtained in the senior class when Patty Bolin, senior class president, accompanies Johnye Sue Hart, secretary, and Jackie Williams, vice-president.

THE CLASS OF '49

The senior play, "Home Sweet Homicide", was produced March 10-11 to finance the senior trip.

April 1 brought buttons and bows and short pants for the annual Kid Day.

The seniors enjoyed the ever impressive junior-senior banquet, also the Methodist Church party and the Baptist Church banquet. The school year for the '49 seniors was ended with their annual trip. The class sponsors are: Miss Virginia Vaughan, head sponsor, Mrs. Elyce Patillo, Miss Gwen Johnson, Miss Margaret Jones, Mr. B. G. Gordon, and Mr. John Plaster.

Language Clubs of Pampa High School

Virginia Vaughan
Head of the Language Department

Most high schools today realize the need of bringing the nations closer together through the medium of language. In these days when only a few hours of travel can take one into a land where English is not the spoken language, the teaching of languages is an important part of high school curriculum.

The school is dark and silent. The last students have gone. The janitor has closed the doors and left for home.

The long day is over, its clamor and bustle have died away, but the turmoil of a new one is just around the corner.
